Give shoppers 10 more reasons to buy from you

Etsy Payments gives your buyers 10 different payment options and lets them pay in their local currency. It all ends up in your bank account on a deposit schedule you create.

Why Etsy Payments?

Buyers want more ways to pay

Etsy Payments gives them many options, including PayPal, Apple Pay, and Etsy gift cards. Actual fact: Shops that enable multiple payment options see 49% higher sales than shops with just one.*

Simplified finances that you control

We'll deposit all sales into your bank account in your local currency, no matter how buyers pay. You can get paid daily, weekly, biweekly, or monthly. Request additional deposits anytime.

We've got your back

All sales processed with Etsy Payments qualify for our Seller Protection Policy. Our payment specialists and fraud-detection systems work around the clock to support and protect you.

*According to a 2016 Etsy analysis, in countries where Direct Checkout was available, active sellers using Etsy Payments saw more than twice the revenue (on average) of active sellers not using Etsy Payments.

Etsy has announced its second round of layoffs in as many months. In a statement today, it said it will cut 140 positions, or about 15 percent of its current workforce. When combined with an earlier downsizing announced in early May, this round brings total eliminated positions to about 230, or about 22 percent of what Etsy's total workforce was at the end of 2016.

Umah is the sole owner of SlimRags. She sells screenprinted tote bags, prints, and shirts. She has been selling on Etsy since June 2016. As of August 2018, she has received 115 total orders.

"I've only been on Etsy for a year. It's my side gig, but I would love to go full time on creative — I got into selling cause I should put my art up for sale."

"I have an Instagram for my popular app. I'm trying to let media be competitive, and so I don't know how people fit them to make a purchase."

"Etsy's blog and seller Facet most of my information about feel like the right community."

Merryn

Age: 48
Location: Albuquerque, New Mexico
Occupation: Full-time jewelry maker

Merryn is the sole owner of TidewaterJewels. She sells custom jewelry on Etsy, eBay, and Shopify. Most of her money comes from Etsy, where she has been selling since 2010. She earned $97,000 on Etsy in 2016.

So far in 2018, TidewaterJewels is 20% under 2017's earnings, and 2017 was 15% below 2016. Merryn wants to correct the downward trend but nothing has worked so far. She is at her wit's end.

"I've been selling on Etsy for a long time; 8 years in total. It's just me, and I have a studio in my basement."

"I made a lot of money in 2016. Since then, my views have gotten worse and worse. Maybe I said something wrong in the forums and Etsy's punishing me?"

"I have a lot going on outside of Etsy. I have two children and a wife. I have bills to pay. I don't have time to figure out marketing, especially not social media. I made a Facebook page, but only my family liked it."

"Etsy's marketing tools feel like a waste of money. I tried promoting my listings for a few months last year. I spent $2.00 a day and got too low of a return."

Shop advice

Shop advice is guidance concerning immediate action related to a seller's shop.

PAGE CONTENTS

- Use cases
- Experience principles
- Placement options
- What makes good shop advice
- Alternatives to shop advice
- Appendix

Use cases

✓ DO USE WHEN

An action is being suggested

Sellers don't just want to know what's going on with their shop—they also want to know what to do about it. Therefore, shop advice must have a call to action.

✓ DO USE WHEN

The action is optional

Sellers should be able to choose to decline the advice if they do not find it relevant. Etsy should use this as an opportunity to collect feedback that helps better personalize future advice.

✗ DO NOT USE WHEN

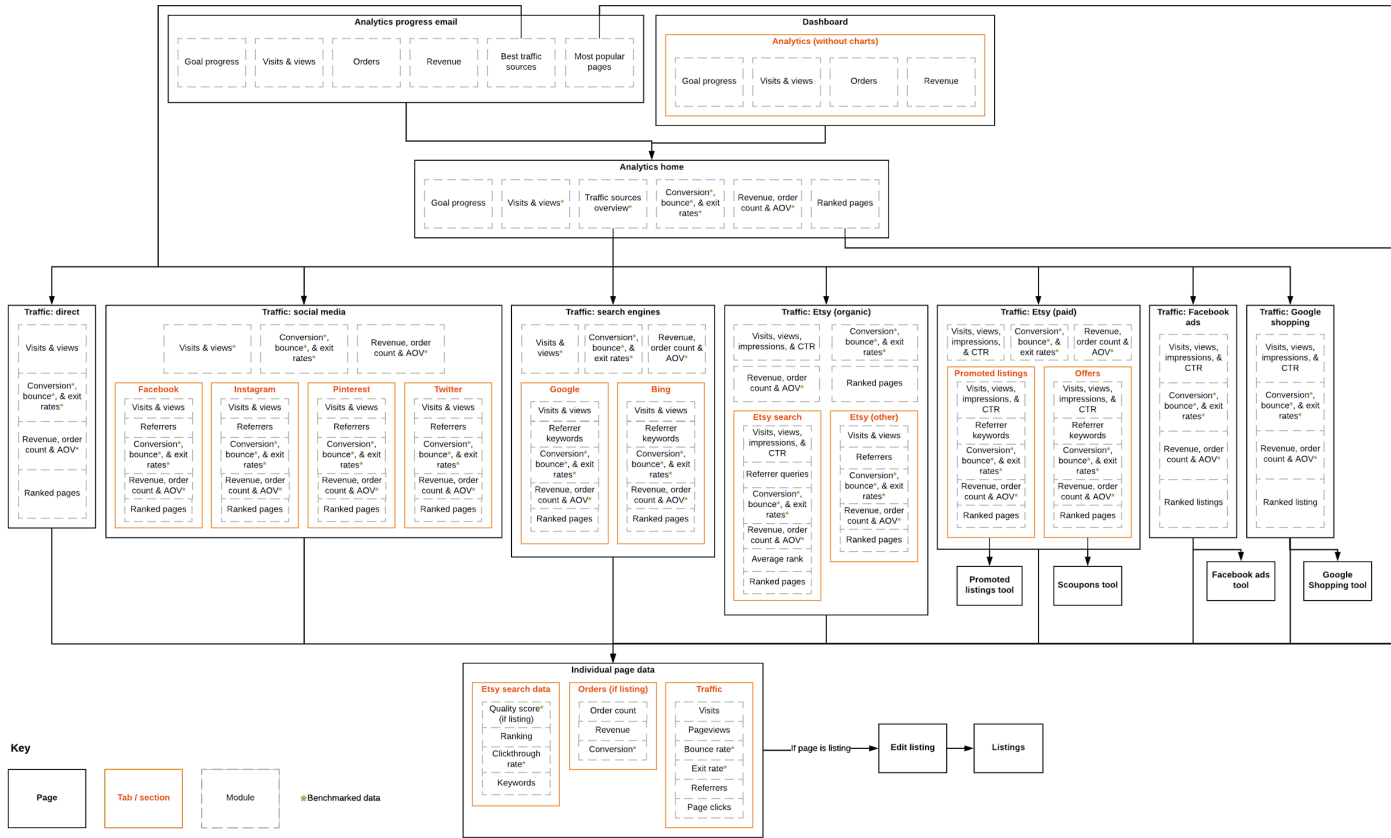

The seller need not perform an action

Guidance without calls to action are nothing more than status updates. Sellers do not find them helpful and often end up more frustrated than they were before.

✗ DO NOT USE WHEN

The action is required

When sellers needed to sign up for Etsy payments, they received news via email announcement and prominent notification. This is different from shop advice, which is optional and can be ignored without consequences.

The transition plan

We released to a beta tester group in September 2019.

LL

I like in new stats the line with " Visits, orders, conversion, revenue" but again I want to compare it with last months or last year.

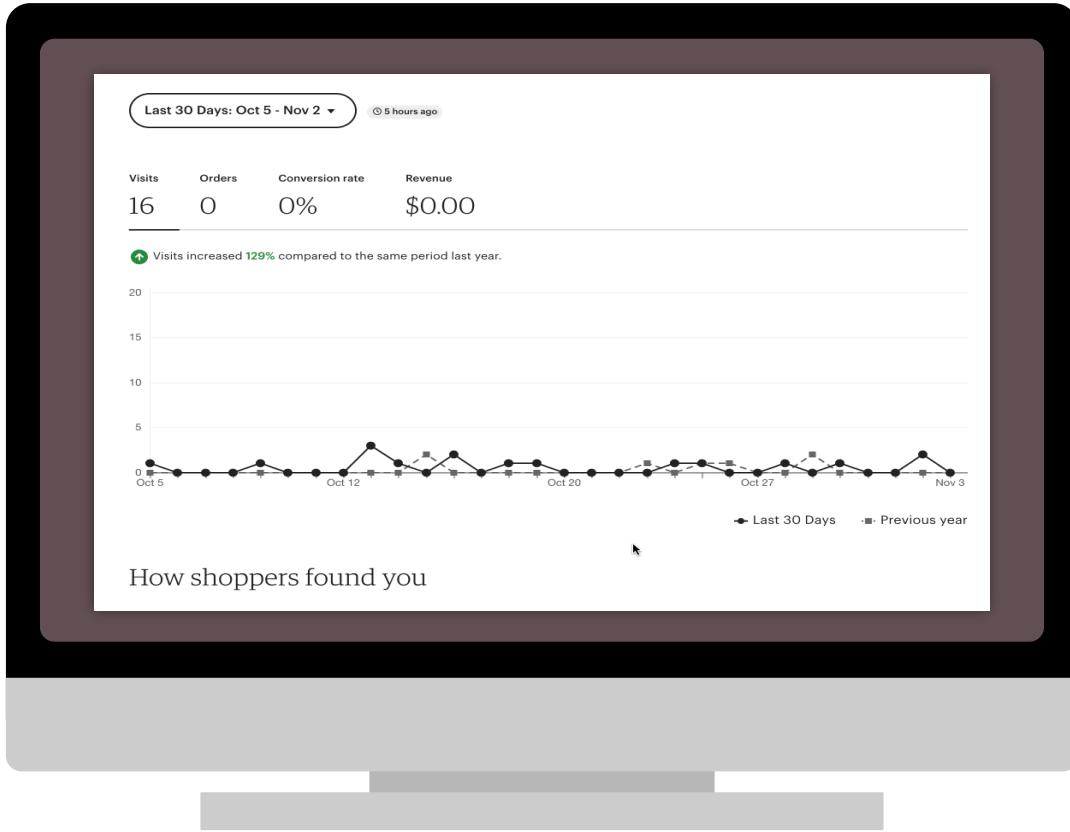

5berries, Etsy seller

There needs to at least be a "custom" option so I can choose to get the specific data I am looking for.

ThePaintedHedge, Etsy seller

The final live experience

After a month, we rolled out
the new stats to all sellers.

LL

I actually like the new stats page much better than the one it replaced. It's closer to the original stats page (which worked just fine and didn't need "improvement") and gives more useful information than that horrible orange graph we've had for so long. Now let's leave the stats page alone etsy, and fix the search function!

CraftySueShop, Etsy seller

SUCCESS!!!

What I learned

Lesson 1

Check if you were set up to succeed

It's probably not you.

Don't blame yourself
if it's not your fault.

Lesson 2

Don't be a hero

Stop filling voids.

When you become the hero, you deprive others
of learning opportunities.

I need your perspective before I can move forward

I can have that ready by Monday

Lesson 3

Pick your battles

Locus of control, J.B. Rotter, 1966

How much do you care?

Meh

This is very important!

How much do you care?

Lesson 4

Try different angles

Make people understand

If you fail to influence,
you did your best.

Step back and see what happens.

Lesson 5

Look for takeaways

We learn from failure.

Where I am now

Post-launch, I felt fulfilled.

I was offered a great opportunity elsewhere.
