

Marketing for Developers

What to do to get your app seen
(without selling your soul.)

Hi, I'm Tracy!

@limedaring
(daring, not darling)

“We estimate that up to two-thirds of the apps in leading consumer app store catalogs receive fewer than 1,000 downloads in their first year, and a significant proportion of those get none at all.”

– <https://www.canalys.com/newsroom/top-app-stores-risk-losing-control-app-discovery>

What you can do to ensure your app gets seen:

Pre-Launch

Marketing is not a substitute for a bad app experience.

“90% of users reported they stopped using an app due to poor performance while over 86% deleted or uninstalled at least one mobile app because of its flawed functionality.”

– <https://www.experiencedynamics.com/blog/2015/03/30-ux-statistics-you-should-not-ignore-infographic>

Make sure you have a good user experience, are solving a need, and reduce bugs and errors.

Do market research.

- Who are your competitors?

- Who are your competitors?
- What are their keywords?

- Who are your competitors?
- What are their keywords?
- What do their reviews say?

- How the actual coding takes a back seat.
- How hard it is to market your app.

Two things inspired me to commit to finishing this blog post:

- Reading an advance copy of the amazing book The Fortune Cookie Principle - The 20 keys to a great brand story and why your business needs one. You must read this book.
- Reading advice from the One More Thing conference about how to write a press release.

Hey Tracy, I just posted this question on Twitter:

Justin Jackson

@mijustin

Theory: the morning is when emails get processed + archived quickly. The afternoon is when email newsletters have a chance. Thoughts?

I thought I'd test it out. 😊

Everyone talks about "product/market" fit. That's the holy grail (finding a good market, and a product that can satisfy that market). But I think there's something more than product/market fit. You can read it here:

justinjackson.ca/want →

I've gotten some really interesting responses to that post (one of them is from Josh Smith - the first quote in the piece). Let me know what you think!

Cheers,

1,000 True Fans

< previous next >

*This is an edited, updated version of an essay I wrote in 2008 when this now popular idea was embryonic and ragged. I recently rewrote it to convey the core ideas, minus out-of-date details. This revisited essay appears in Tim Ferriss' new book, Tools of Titans. I believe the 1,000 True Fans concept will be useful to anyone making things, or making things happen. If you still want to read the much longer original 2008 essay, you can get it after the end of this version. — KK*

To be a successful creator you don't need millions. You don't need millions of dollars or millions of customers, millions of clients or millions of fans. To make a living as a craftsperson, photographer, musician, designer, author, animator, app maker, entrepreneur, or inventor you need only thousands of true fans.

A true fan is defined as a fan that will buy anything you produce. These diehard fans will drive 200 miles to see you sing; they will buy the hardback and paperback and audible versions of your book; they will purchase your next figurine sight unseen; they will pay for the "best-of" DVD version of your free youtube channel; they will come to your chef's table once a month. If you have roughly a thousand of true fans like this (also known as super fans), you can make a living — if you are content to make a living but not a fortune.

Here's how the math works. You need to meet two criteria. First, you have to create enough each year that you can earn, on average, $100 profit from each true fan. That is easier to do in some arts and businesses than others, but it is a good creative challenge in every area because it is always easier and better to give your existing customers more, than it is to find new fans.

Second, you must have a direct relationship with your fans. That is, they must pay you directly. You get to keep all of their support, unlike the small percent of their fees you might get from a music label, publisher, studio, retailer, or other intermediate. If you keep the full $100 of each true fan, then you need only 1,000 of them to earn $100,000 per year. That's a living for most folks.

A thousand customers is a whole lot more feasible to aim for than a million fans. Millions of paying fans is not a realistic goal to shoot for, especially when you are starting out. But a thousand fans

- Have a good eye-catching icon.

smashingmagazine.com/2017/01/designing-better-app-icons/

Icon

Your app icon is one of the first elements of your app that users see, so it's essential to make a strong first impression that communicates your app's quality and purpose. Work with a graphic designer to create an icon that is simple and recognizable. Try testing different options to determine which icon is the most recognizable and meaningful to your target audience.

To ensure the icon is legible in all sizes, avoid adding unnecessary visual details. For information about creating a beautiful and memorable icon, see the Human Interface Guidelines.

Creating that singular piece of graphic design that users will first interact with each time they encounter your product can be intimidating. A beautiful, identifiable and memorable app icon design can have a huge impact on the popularity and success of the app. But how exactly does one make a “good” app icon? What does that even mean? Fear not, I’ve put together some tips and advice to help answer these questions and to guide you on your way to designing great app icons.

I’ve been designing, making resources and giving talks about icon design for the past couple of years. In this article, and in the video at the end, I’ll sum up what I’ve learned about this amazing craft.

App Name

Your app's name plays a critical role in how users discover it on the App Store. Choose a simple, memorable name that is easy to spell and hints at what your app does. Be distinctive. Avoid names that use generic terms or are too similar to existing app names.

The length of your app name is limited to 30 characters and will appear on the App Store for each device, including each version of iPhone, iPad, and Apple TV.

- (New) Optimize your subtitle.

Subtitle

Your app's subtitle appears below your app name throughout the App Store in iOS 11. A subtitle can be up to 30 characters long, and is intended to summarize your app in a concise phrase. Avoid generic descriptions such as "world's best app." Instead, consider using your subtitle to highlight features or typical uses of your app that resonate with your audience.

A compelling subtitle can encourage product page views and downloads. You can test different versions of your subtitle at different points in your app's lifecycle — when you release a major update to your app, for example — to determine the subtitle that's most effective for engaging users. You can update your app's subtitle when submitting a new version of your app.

Description

Provide an engaging description that highlights the features and functionality of your app. The ideal description is a concise, informative paragraph followed by a short list of main features. Let potential users know what makes your app unique and why they will love it. Communicate in the tone of your brand, and use terminology your target audience will appreciate and understand.

The first sentence of your description is the most important — this is what users can read without having to tap to read more. Every word counts, so focus your description on your app's unique features. If you choose to mention an accolade, we recommend putting it at the end of your description or as part of your promotional text.

Don't add unnecessary keywords to your description in an attempt to improve search results. Also avoid including specific prices in your app description. Pricing is already shown on the product page, and references within the

Create a press kit.

Include an overview, screenshots at various sites, icons at various sizes, etc.

What to Put in Your Press-Kit ?

The good news is it's not going to take you much time, you should have all the stuff already. Here is what you need (be nice to them, create some folders !) :

- App Icon

Put a high-quality icon of your app. Don't use the one you uploaded on the iTunes Store, be sure to create one that looks like what people see on the iTunes store (with round corners). You might want to offer some smaller sizes to, so they don't have to resize it. If you have slightly different icons for each OS, put them all.

- Screenshots

Just put as many relevant screenshots as you can. Put the ones you used on your App Store page, and put some more. It should give them a pretty good idea of what's in your app. If your app is available on several OS, create separate folders for each one so that bloggers and journalists can go directly to what they need.

- Press Releases

Put all your app press releases, so that they can know the “history” of your mobile app and see that you don't stop making improvements and updates. They'll know you and your app better, and will have your contact info

Ask for reviews in your app?

iOS App Review Sites – 170+ Sites That Review iPhone And Apps

Welcome to the updated listing of iPhone and iPad app review sites listing in iOS development that was first posted over six years ago and has been updated many times since. The list has grown since the last update and includes sites that post reviews for both iPhone and iPad apps. More foreign language sites have been added as many have grown considerably in traffic since the last update.

Updated January 26th 2017

This list is posted sorted by Alexa traffic rankings and have been checked to ensure each of the pages are working.

The best way to use this list is to look for sites that have reviewed apps similar to yours. As far as the traffic rankings go sites with an Alexa rating

Can You Use Giveaways to Promote Your Mobile App

The Good, The Bad and The Ugly of Using Giveaways

Recently there was a very interesting discussion on the App Entrepreneurs Group, where one of the members wanted to find out if he could use Giveaways to market his app. Although the question was not very clear in terms of the actual giveaway strategy wanting to be employed, the comments from other users created a lot of confusion.

In this post I am trying to clear the misconceptions around using giveaways to promote your app. But first let's see why should we even consider giveaways.

Writing great App Store release notes

Learning from the good, the average and the ugly

I've written before about how great copy should live everywhere. If you're an indie developer trying to make your mark on the App Store, ensuring that the copy inside and around your app is written to win over users can only be a good thing. Not convinced? Here are a few reasons why:

1. It doesn't have to be hard. If you've ever stood in front of a stranger and explained how your app works to the point where they're smiling, you've pretty much nailed it already. Write whatever you said down and you've got a solid starting point.
