One day hundreds of JIRA tickets showed up in my inbox...

This triggered my fight or flight response.

Some simple math told me...

$$\begin{array}{ccccccc} 313 & \div & 5 & = & 63 & == & 2+ \\ \text{ISSUES} & & \text{ISSUES} & & \text{SPRINTS} & & \text{YEARS} \\ & & \text{PER SPRINT} & & & & \end{array}$$

We had created a log jam.

THE GOAL

A PROCESS OF ONGOING IMPROVEMENT

30th Anniversary Edition

Eli Goldratt has been described by Fortune as a "guru to industry" and by Business Week as a "genius". His book, The Goal, is a gripping fastpaced business novel.

"Goal readers are now doing the best work of their lives."
Success Magazine

"A factory may be an unlikely setting for a novel, but the book has been wildly effective..."
Tom Peters

How to be an open source gardener

April 14, 2014

I do a lot of work on open source, but my most valuable contributions haven't been code. Writing a patch is the easiest part of open source. The truly hard stuff is all of the rest: bug trackers, mailing lists, documentation, and other management tasks. Here's some things I've learned along the way.

It was RailsConf 2012. I sat in on a panel discussion, and the number of issues open on rails/rails came up. There were about 800 issues at the time, and had been for a while. Inquiring minds wished to know if that number was ever going to drop, and how the community could help. It was brought up that there was an 'Issues team,' whose job would be to triage issues. I enthusiastically volunteered.

But what does 'issue triage' mean, exactly? Well, on a project as large as Rails, there are a ton of issues that are incomplete, stale, need more information... and nobody was tending to them. It's kind of like a garden: you need someone to pull weeds, and do it often and regularly.

But before we talk about how to pull the weeds, let's figure out what kind of garden we even have on our hands!

What are Issues?

The very first thing your project needs to do is to figure out what Issues are supposed to be for. Each project is different. For example, in Rails, we keep Issues strictly for bugs only. Help questions go to Stack Overflow, and new feature discussion and requests go to the rails-core mailing list. For Rust, we have issues for feature requests, meta-issues... everything. For some repositories, closing all of the issues is not feasible, and for others, you're shooting for zero. (If you don't believe that this is even possible, check out Sequel. Issues are rarely

Hitting the limitations of JIRA

The image displays a screenshot of the JIRA web interface. The main view is a Kanban board for a project named "Teams in Space". The board shows several tasks in the "TO DO" column, including "Engage Jupiter Express outer solar system tra...", "Create 90 day plans fo departments in the Mars...", and "Engage Saturn's Rings as a preferred provider...".

A detailed view of a task is overlaid on the board. The task is titled "Build Android application package" and is currently in the "In Review" status. The assignee is Blair Bell and the reporter is Rahul Ramsey. The task has two comments from Blair Bell, both dated November 7, 2018, at 1:51 AM. The first comment says "data has been sent to PA and they are reviewing" and the second says "what is the date for review?".

Overlaid on the bottom right of the task view is a summary of the task's progress across different stages:

- DEVELOPMENT: 1 branch, 10 commits (2 hours ago), 1 pull request (CLOSED), 2 builds (checked).
- RELEASES: Production (checked), Deployment Feature Flag 1 (ON).

In late 2018, WPCampus released a request for proposals to conduct an accessibility audit of the WordPress block editor, also known as Gutenberg. In early 2019, we announced our selection of Tenon, LLC to conduct the audit, at a cost of $31,200.

Today, we're excited to release Tenon's report on the accessibility of the new editor.

This report was made possible by the extraordinary generosity of more than 100 members of the WordPress community, who collectively contributed $10,264 to fund this project. We're also grateful to Matt Mullenweg and Automattic, who pledged to ensure that the audit would be fully funded and are covering the balance of the cost of this effort.

In addition, this audit would not be possible without the members of our vendor selection committee. These amazing and talented

A black and white photograph showing a massive boom of logs floating in a wide river. The logs are piled high and stretch far into the distance. Several men are standing in the water, some holding long poles, likely managing the boom. In the background, a dense forest of tall trees lines the riverbank under a clear sky.
